

Booth Paint Fumes

Benjamin Moore
Addicted to that eggshell finish

Hey, guys, this paint smells weird. Yeah, someone come over here and smell this...whoa what happened to Midway? Where am I? Is this...Mars? Am I finally free of...wait, what university do I go to? Central Michigan? No, Colorado Mesa. No, China Medical University. Oh, wait, Capital Markets Union. How could I forget? That's where my good buddy Farnam Jahanian lives. Oh, I can't believe I left him behind. I told him we'd go to Mars together.

What's that? It's a buggy! It's coming straight for me! Hey! Stop! Wait- that's not a buggy, that's a scissor lift. And the person driving it doesn't have a green wristband. I gotta report them to SCC...where'd the SCC trailer go?

How to tell if your classmates peaked in college

Samson Rozansky
Has his whole life ahead of him

As CMU alumni return to their alma mater for the carnival season, one question is at the top of their minds as they see their former classmates: "Did they peak in university?"

To help out our fellow Tartans, we have created this guide on how to identify people who peaked in university.

1. Are they a grad student?

Grad students are just people who peaked so hard in college they're spending a few hundred grand to avoid leaving.

2. Are they still posting on LinkedIn?

Who actually cares about LinkedIn now that they have a professional life? They should focus more on their current lives rather than stalking people's careers and seeing if other people are being successful, even though they knew them to be complete bums in undergrad.

(Please send me a connection at <https://www.linkedin.com/in/sam-rozansky/>)

3. Are they your ex?

100%. Don't even worry about it

4. Are they trying to go to a frat party with people who were in middle school while they were studying business here?

C'mon man at least hit on people within the same decade as you.

1. Do you dislike them?

If you dislike them, then of course they peaked in university! There is no possible way that this person is actually succeeding in life or is even happy at all.

You're almost there!
