

VOLUME III

ISSUE VIII

readme THROWS A CARNIVAL

NYC Renter SHOCKED
by spacious booths (p. 7)

Pitt Still Thinks
We're Lame (p. 1)

Your Classmates
Peaked in College
(p. 5)

Dear Alumni (p. 2)

Super Legal Pranks (p. 3)

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF:
Eshaan Joshi

cmureadme.com

CARNIVAL: Free
RIDES: $3

Carnival makes Pitt rethink CMU: 'Even lamer than we thought'

Jimothy Yachtsson
Cool CMU student

Students visiting Carnival from the University of Pittsburgh report their impressions of Carnegie Mellon have fallen, and not risen. Instead of finding CMU cool for the first time ever, students say they are disappointed by the "degree of nerdiness" and hard work that goes into Carnival.

Students at the University of Pittsburgh, henceforth Pitt because I'm not writing all that (I'm a business student don't blame me), historically had low conceptions of CMU. Pitt students think CMU students work on problem sets and... yeah, that's about it. CMU students don't sleep, party, or talk to each other at all except for homework help (read: AIVs). Or so they say at Pitt, according to Readme's confidential sources.

Many CMU students figured that there's no better chance to prove how lit CMU is than Spring Carnival: the one time of year students have a different reason for not sleeping. Although Readme has not definitively proven by induction that there is no better way (sorry I'm a Tepper student), we can present strong evidence Pitt students weren't as impressed by Carnival as many CMU students had hoped.

"So, instead of engineering a circuit board, you engineer a tiny wheeled torpedo for short people?" a Pitt student at the Buggy races asked Readme. "That's, like, still engineering. Lame!" In a bid to show the student something they would undoubtedly find cooler, Readme then brought this Pitt student to the Booths on Midway.

"Wow, so much work went into this!" the Pitt student told Readme, before following up with: "Imagine if the students who worked on this spent all that time partying instead. That would've been so much cooler."

Readme then considered taking this Pitt student to the Mobot race before deciding that that wouldn't help at all.

It wasn't just that one Pitt student who was disappointed by Carnival: The opinions expressed by this one Pitt student represent all Pitt students because they are all equivalent and do not have thoughts of their own, because they do not go to a top-21 national university.

Join our discord!!

If only OJ had gone to CMU...

Rejected Headlines #22

- Mudge Koi Fish never returned — new sushi place set to open on Morewood Ave
- Excessive lead found in the food and water of JFC
- Grand Reopening of Architect's leap in the leadup to finals week
- CMU Hollywood theme goes straight to streaming
- SDC Booth delayed due to noncompliance with city zoning regulations
- This Article Replaces Your Bioraft Training
- Academic Office allows you to superscore GPA and BAC during Carnival only
- How to not have your self-esteem brought down by all the clearly smarter students in your tour group
- Booth Gloryhole Competition Winner Announced
- CMU Suicide Club announces no returning members for Academic Year 25-26
- Buggy orgs fret over possible shortages of small Asian women following letter on the CCP
- Carnival will be a nice time to decompress, says student planning on staying up for 72 straight hours to build a two-story house
- "What do you mean they don't know the difference between wet layup and prepreg?" CMU students shocked by lackluster carbon fiber fabrication knowledge of average person.

All this and more, not in this issue!

BI<>RAFT

Certificate of Universal Completion

Presented to in recognition of having completed

Safety!

Midway access, no PPE
Open carrying in permit states
Level Four security clearance
in the Pentagon

Five free steam tunnel visits
Access to diamond vault
in Techspark casting room
Admittance to federal group
chat (Signal™ Premium™™)

Spring Carnival Committee found dead in office

"Tyan Rosh"
Numb

The CMU community is in shock after the discovery on Wednesday morning that all of Spring Carnival Committee (SCC) has died. An FMS maintenance worker discovered their remains in the SCC office on the third floor of the UC, and autopsy reports state that they had likely been dead for weeks. While students and faculty are mourning the loss of several upstanding members of the CMU community, they're also relieved to have an answer as to why so many delays occurred during preparations for Booth. "SCC was so slow to put out the form for booth chairs," one student stated on Midway. "If I'd known the directors of Booth were skeletons lying on the floor of the UC, I would've been fine with the delays. They just need to communicate better."

The cause of the numerous deaths is still unknown, but there are some clues. Some orgs suspect foul play, especially in light of recent tensions between SCC and SDC over their suspiciously similar names. Others suspect a gas leak, which may explain the increasingly confused actions SCC took in their final hours, perhaps reflecting a gradual loss of consciousness due to asphyxiation. Nevertheless Booth will continue, though further delays can be anticipated. Students took the opportunity prior to move-on to mourn the loss of SCC, as they waited half an hour past their scheduled times to be allowed onto Midway. CMU is urging students to remove their hard hats out of respect, and to drown their grief in copious amounts of alcohol during Carnival.

Dear Alumni:

"Tyan Rosh"
Give him your money

Dear CMU alumni,
I know that you'll often get overly cheerful letters from CMU, saying how much they love you and how cool you must be, when all they really want is your money. We at readme detest this practice. In fact, we'd like to take the opportunity to tell you that we wish you'd just die already.

We need money. CMU is trying to starve us out, and stealing random first-years' IDs for print budget just doesn't pay the bills like it used to. We considered writing you a sincere little note about your cool little job and how readme could pave the way for younger CMU students to follow in your footsteps, but statistically, you're probably a piece of shit who works in the defense industry or investment banking.

If you flip this page over and turn it inside out, you'll find photos taken through the scope of a rifle, showing you throughout your daily routine. If you have a wife or children, they'll be in there too. This is not extortion and we will not accept your money. We would sooner let this be the last thing we ever print than give you the slightest hint of appreciation or respect.

Sincerely,
The README Fundraising
Committee

Hey Alums! Here's what's new on campus

Gilgamesh Ichthyomorphosis
Historian

Welcome back to campus, alumni! We hope that you have fun during carnival, and that the school brings back warm memories of your time here. CMU's changed a lot since you've graduated, but don't fear: readMe is here to get you up to speed.

Schatz has acquired its first Michelin star.

The premiere dining experience on CMU's campus is Schatz dining hall. We recommend alumni enjoy a delightful supper. However, be aware that the dress code is strictly enforced, and anything less than a suit will get you evicted from the premises. They didn't pay for 2nd-floor window access for nothing.

Entropy has reasonably priced items.

Following popular demand Entropy has re-evaluated its pricing scheme. The cost of a bag of chips has gone from 1 kidney to $13.99.

Walking to the sky has been extended by 1 foot.

We don't really know why they did this one. Make sure to remind current students that when you were here walking to the sky was a foot shorter. But only 'about', because you're mostly sure, and it used to seem a little taller anyway back before Gates was installed or whatever.

15-122 is now an easy light hearted class.

Current students don't know the pain they could have suffered. Make sure to point out that when you were here it was a real class and this generation doesn't know how good they have it. You had to walk to check-ins uphill both ways, after all.

CMU Football is all the rage.

Students have finally recognized the talent of our football players. There are rumors of plans for a new, larger football stadium in the works.

Unfortunately Donner is still here.

If there's one thing that will never change about CMU, it's the empty promise that Donner will be torn down. This time they really mean it, guys.

DIY FAKE ID

FILL IN THE BLANKS

USA

MISSOURI

DRIVER LICENSE

9 CLASS F 4b EXP

4d DL NO. T123456789 3 DOB

1

2

8

Paste Photo Here

9a END M 12 RESTRICTIONS A

15 SEX 17 WGT

16 HGT 18 EYES

4a ISS

DONOR

Paste Photo Here

VETERAN

5 DD

02/14/79

Booth Stuns CMU With Structural Anomaly

Johnny Truant
This is not for you

When Spring Carnival Committee began a routine structural check on what seemed to be an ordinary one-story booth, it certainly never expected to discover a scientific mystery that would stump even the greatest minds CMU has to offer. Yet that's exactly what happened when SCC checked the booth built by Zampanò's Literature club. During the structural check, it was discovered that the booth was a quarter inch bigger on the inside when compared to the outside.

ZLC's booth, themed after the hit documentary The Navidson Record, seemed laughably simple upon first glance. The walls are painted pitch black and there is no game for visitors to play. Although ZLC finished their structural work notably quicker than other blitz organizations, work on the booth ceased immediately afterwards. Nearby clubs noted that they never actually saw ZLC members working on the booth: Benner Rogers, a student at CMU working on booth for the CMU KGB, stated that the walls "just seemed to come up on their own." When questioned further, she explained that,

"I've never seen anyone step foot on their plot, but every time I left and came back something would be different. First it was the floor being finished. Then, new walls would pop up and get sheathed. And the really, I mean really weird thing was that it was all pre-painted. Even the wall frames are black..." With an uneasy glance at the booth, she quickly added, "I don't like to look at it much."

When the discovery of the booth's spatial anomaly was made, it was initially chalked up to human error. But for many, the explanation is far too little. Rogers is also dissatisfied with official explanations.

"I saw them measure the floor nearly fifty times. It's not human error. I know it's not. Something is seriously wrong in there and someone needs to find out what."

Due to the controversy, CMU administration have temporarily closed ZLC's booth for Carnival. A ZLC representative was not able to be located to comment.

Author's note: The night before this article was to be printed, Ms. Rogers sent me a letter. I have enclosed the text below in its entirety:

I did it. I finally went inside. And... the door is gone. I mean, it's still there on the outside. But on the inside... on the inside it just continues. There's just a hallway, just as black as the rest of the booth. I don't know how far it goes. I was too scared to go any further.

I'm going inside again tonight. I need to know what's at the end. This house is calling to me. I'll write back when I make it out alive.

Benner Rogers

Since writing this letter, Benner Rogers has reportedly gone missing. If you have any information on her whereabouts, please call the CMU Police Department.

Funny Pranks We Legally Can't Tell You To Pull During Carnival

Mihir Deshpande

Gets Harrisburg put under martial law every April 1st

Pulling pranks is great, just yesterday I pulled a hilarious prank where I put some opioids in a guys' beer. With Carnival leading to all kinds of people being out and about on campus, it's the perfect time for a little fun. But maybe you're tired of the same old boring schtick of screaming "FIRE" or yelling at hungover people through a megaphone. Not to worry, for the past thousand years I have been honing myself in the art doing a little trolling. So, let me tell you some of my favorite gags and gaffs to pull at Carnival.

First is a classic, the SWAT call. It's incredibly easy to pull off: call 911, say that someone has a bomb and is threatening to blow up the university, pretend to panic, hang up, then grab some popcorn and watch. Pretty quickly (depending on how many other pranks are occurring that day), there'll be a full SWAT team, armed and ready to kill on sight. After enjoying watching everyone freak out for a bit, you can inform them it was "just a prank bro." That automatically acts as a legal Get Out of Jail Free Card, so you can just laugh along with everyone about your funny joke - no harm, no foul. I personally have pulled this prank on friends, neighbors, churches, lemonade stands, and at my high school before I was expelled. So I can guarantee it'll always land.

If you want people to have their eyes on you, streaking is THE tried and true method. Doing this is even easier than a SWAT call: just take off all your clothes and run faster than CMUPD. This is guaranteed to draw the eyes of roaming students, alumni, parents, and children at Carnival, who'll all be mesmerized by the hilarity of your joke. I can personally attest that the sight of someone running from CMUPD in their birthday suit always draws laughs. It's a prank that can be enjoyed by everyone, some enjoying much more than others. Worried about revealing yourself to not be very well-endowed? No worries, just get absolutely wasted. That always solves my self-confidence issues. Last year I did this at my local Elementary school and everyone loved it, they all couldn't stop screaming with laughter.

Perhaps you really want to get an emotional reaction though. This isn't something I personally enjoy, but all you sadists out there may derive great pleasure from this. You've all probably seen those videos where people ask other people to do challenges, and then they reward them with large amounts of money for completing those challenges. Then there's also some tear jerking bit about how the money will change their lives or whatnot. So what you do is that you give them some really difficult to complete challenges (run a mile under ten minutes, walk across burning coals, etc.). Then when they finish, you bounce. Either just don't give them money or, if you're really sinister, just give them fake money for that emotional reaction. It'll be just like those fake challenge videos online, except this time only the money is fake.

Finally, the last prank I can tell you about is one time honored CMU tradition, gazorching. Don't know what gazorching is, just ask any member of staff or alumni, I'm sure they'd be happy to tell you. There isn't even a requirement to use water; I've found paint, hydrofluoric acid, mustard gas, agent orange, and radon to all be easy to obtain and extra effective as ammo. Gazorching already has the bonus of being a time honored CMU tradition. So go and gazorch all over the place! (This article was paid for by CMU Advocates for Gazorching)

Bored? Single? Looking for love at Carnegie Mellon? Forget that, come write satire for readme! No experience required or requested. We're always looking for clowns, funny guys, smart-alecks, layout artists, and wealthy alumni willing to give us their money. Please.

We're looking for you and your skills, or lack thereof, Saturdays at 5 in DH1117

Horse-Drawn Buggy

SIGBOVIK 2025

FRI, APR 4th, 5-10pm
Rashid Auditorium

www.sigbovik.org

The WORLD'S GREATEST MINDS assemble at CMU's esotericest academic conference: Witness
GROUNDBREAKING SCIENTIFIC INNOVATION at SIGBOVIK!

DONATE!

How to tell if your classmates peaked in college

Samson Rozansky
Has his whole life ahead of him

As CMU alumni return to their alma mater for the carnival season, one question is at the top of their minds as they see their former classmates: "Did they peak in university?" To help out our fellow Tartans, we have created this guide on how to identify people who peaked in university.

1. Are they a grad student?

Grad students are just people who peaked so hard in college they're spending a few hundred grand to avoid leaving. Instead of building new lives, starting families, growing savings, they are just doing the one thing they know best: procrastinating on actually starting anything, like having a career.

2. Are they still posting on LinkedIn?

Who actually uses LinkedIn now that they have a professional life? Only people desperately trying to convince everyone (including themselves) that they're thriving. They should focus more on their current lives rather than stalking people's careers and seeing if other people are successful, even though they knew them to be complete bums in undergrad who couldn't even finish Core@CMU correctly. (Please send me a connection at <https://www.linkedin.com/in/sam-rozansky/> – I need the validation to sleep at night)

3. Are they your ex?

100% peaked. Don't even worry about it.

4. Are they trying to go to a frat party with people who were in middle school while they were studying business here?

C'mon man, at least hit on people within the same decade as you.

5. Do you dislike them?

If you dislike them, then of course they peaked in university! There is no possible way this person is actually succeeding in life or is even happy at all. Basic science proves that people you personally dislike cannot possibly be thriving. This can even be applied to current students! If you don't like them, they definitely peaked in high school and are currently in the midst of a four-year downward spiral. That's just karma working as intended.

Do It Yourself Wordle!

SDC BUGGY NOTICE BOARD Freshmen Job Openings

Alex Werth
The children yearn for the guard shifts

SDC BUGGY
Inexperienced working freshmen wanted! Inquire with us for:

STRONG SECURITY NEEDED for intellectual property protection on rolls, race mornings. Must be steadfast, relatively uncurious, good with cold. PAY MARGINAL, EXPERIENCE INVALUABLE. For full particulars see [Redacted], arrive with jacket.

TONGUE-TIED? APPLY NOW in official Deer In Headlights capacity. Looking for committed actors, authentic anxious wrecks, to maintain SDC external reputation. Build secret sharers will be BOOTED, protectors HANDSOMELY REWARDED. Apply direct: prepare lip-quiver for inspection.

FIELD TRAINING – Splendid opportunities to train youths in ag. trade of hay growing, cutting, baling. Short training; constant vacancies; room and PPE provided. Hours early but precious, ENGAGED YOUNG FARMERS ONLY!

MICHAELANGELO NEEDED! Students of Art disciplines and dispositions; wanted for design of upcoming buggy paint job. Renaissance, Klint, hex-code, Adobe Photoshop familiarity needed. Temp position; limited slots. GREAT DESIGNS, GREAT REWARDS! Mail application with enclosed color swatch (Singular) to student SMC 54.

introducing:

5 HOUR MELCIUS

2 HOUR MELCIUS

For all your final exam needs!

Can "help" with:

- Locking In
- Locking Out
- 122 Exam
- Normal Breathing Patterns
- Too Much Sleep

And so much more!

WARNING:

Use may cause uncontrollable vomiting, explosive diarrhea, severe delusions, bone-crushing pain, skin peeling off in sheets, sudden blindness to the color purple, hearing high-pitched screaming that isn't there, feeling insects crawling under the skin, relentless itching that won't stop, nails falling off spontaneously, shattered teeth, unstoppable bleeding from eyes, coughing up lung, paralysis, unbearable sensitivity to light and sound, swelling until skin splits, excruciating muscle spasms, extreme vertigo, feeling like your body is on fire but having no burns and nausea.

The Hunt

Kanya Dogan

Not A Real Social Anthropologist

The Penn of Western Pennsylvania, Carnegie Mellon University, is known globally as a hub of innovation, interdisciplinary collaboration, and so much more. Not only are these hardworking students known for their level of involvement in undergraduate and graduate research, but they have also been trailblazers in the field of collegiate tradition generation. Buggy racing, a sport originating from gilded-age fraternity brothers drunkenly racing each other down hills in buggies (Western Pennsylvania English for "shopping cart"), is probably the most well known tradition originating from this campus. However, there are many more that aren't as well known: Painting the fence, "Gazorching," Inverse Bungee Jumping, Carnival, just to name a few. However, I would like to bring to light one peculiarly delightful tradition known ominously as "The Hunt". This tradition involves participants stripping entirely naked at the dead of night, and slathering themselves head-to-toe with peanut butter. Participants then hide all over campus, trying to evade a pack of starving Scottish Terriers looking for their first meal in over a month.

Following is one account by a local student who participated in the year 2024, –

"In my first year here at CMU during carnival, I saw a flyer for "the Hunt" somewhere on campus – and there was a QR code you could scan to sign up. It said it was pretty competitive because everyone wants to do it, and it could only take up to 30 students. I managed to make it in because I wrote some really good essay questions on why I wanted to participate. I remember we all lined up at 2 am outside Hunt Library – which is named after the Hunt actually – and then we heard the dogs barking. It got increasingly louder as the U-Haul trucks came closer carrying the dogs. Farnam himself stood with a large tub of peanut butter and he was slathering the students himself. We all stood shoulder-to-shoulder in front of Hunt and then the starter pistol fired and we all ran. We were told we had two minutes until when the dogs would be released, but it felt like a lot less. I had planned and practiced a little bit, and my strategy was to run to Highmark, because the dogs would not recognize the new building. Unfortunately I had dripped some peanut butter on the way there, and I actually heard a dog badging into highmark. I heard it get closer and closer and I heard some sniffing at the keyhole of the door I was hiding behind – fortunately, I heard a loud noise outside, and then the dog started running, and I heard a student screaming outside. I took the opportunity to run into the maintenance penthouse and onto the roof, where I waited it out until sunrise, which is when the game ends. As a prize, I got a free raspberry pi 4."

Blood sports like this typically aren't allowed on college campuses, but here at Carnegie Mellon, not only is it encouraged, but the president himself slathers you in the peanut butter.

People you don't want to be alone in a booth with

Mihir Deshpande

Professional Hater

- A serial killer
- A cereal killer (if you're a box of Froot Loops®)
- A cobra (SigEp is really putting in the work)
- An IRS agent (who actually pays their taxes?)
- A Jehovah's Witness (now they have a way to solicit on-campus)
- That guy who watches me through my window while I sleep
- An older brother (the bane of many people's [mine included] existences)
- A United Airlines staff member
- A human trafficker (if, unlike me, you have strength or sex appeal)
- Your stalker
- A smooth criminal

- That friendly guy you know whose name you feel guilty for not knowing
- A Boeing exec (if you're a Boeing whistleblower)
- A Mario character (if you're a Boeing, or any company, exec)
- Shou Tucker (if you have a dog)
- John Wilkes Booth (if you have a beard and top-hat)
- Medusa (if you somehow don't struggle to make eye contact with people)
- A WZ-120 - Type 59 - tank (COMMENT REDACTED BY THE CCP)
- SCP-682
- Rabbit of Caerbannog (if you seek the Holy Grail)
- Creeper (aww man)
- An SCS Student (leading cause of phantasmia in the United States)

PRESENTED BY:
ISABELLE
FLORENCE

If you're looking to exploit the supernatural world for bragging rights this carnival, you've come to the right place. Use the vagueness of the driver requirements to your advantage and "employ" the right cryptid for the job. Gnomes might seem like the obvious choice, as they're small, humanoid, and able to operate machinery. Unfortunately, following the death of Gnome Andrew Carnegie, gnome labour unions have gotten out of hand, allowing them to pull Rumpelstiltskin-adjacent shit much easier. They'll drive for you, but ten years down the line they'll realize that your virgin ass isn't having a firstborn. Expect to hear from a gnome lawyer.

"What about goblins?" you might ask. Much like hamsters, it's written in the stars that no goblin will have a normal death. Now you put that sucker in a carbon fiber torpedo and you'll spend the rest of your days washing green goop out of your clothes. A solid choice if you're looking to claim some life insurance money, not great for much else.

The clear answer is the Mongolian Death Worm. SDC has been using these bad boys for years. Found in the Gobi Desert, a Mongolian Death Worm can make for one hell of a driver. As long as you avoid the electrical shocks and venom spray, just get one in a buggy and it'll know what to do, running nastier lines than the ones Purnell students snort.

SCC preps for Carnival

"Save-a-tree" Bhat
Took SCC swimming lessons for 5 years

As Carnival comes nearer, SCC's heart has been squarely in the work getting Midway ready for students, alumni, and lost geese to have a fun and safe experience. They've been toiling away for weeks, and here at Readme, we forgive them for their foolish tendencies, like their tardiness on literally all of the important deadlines (it's hard to keep track with the time zones) or their cowardliness in the face of rain. SCC only gets about 17 inches of rain per year, in comparison to Pittsburgh's 43.

As the building of booths on Midway continued, Readme checked up on SCC to make sure they knew what they were doing. SCC released this statement: "Now that we know what a booth is, we are prepared to inspect booths and dispense wisdom to the builders of Midway." Of course, they're pretty far from the action, so they'll need their Midway watch shift to keep an eye on things for them. And if they don't have the tools or PPE that builders need, tough luck. The city only gives them so much money.

SCC is excited to have some awesome buggy races this year. While no SCC staff have seen a buggy in person before, they swear they know how the races work. One staff member reported "The much anticipated buggy races will be...wait what do you mean there are people inside? They chose to be there? Of their own free will?" SCC is reportedly revising their plans to have a "bumper car" category in Sweepstakes.

We thank Spokane Community College for their hard work and dedication to providing an amazing Carnival experience for the whole CMU community.

A Letter...

...from the Editor

[illegible]

NYC Renter SHOCKED by Spacious Booths

Bridget McMahon
Avid Renter

Wednesday. 2:00 PM. Pittsburgh.
It was supposed to be a fun weekend getaway, but for 28-year-old
Manhattan barista and renter John Novak, even a glimpse into the festive booths at Carnival turned into an existential crisis on the state of real estate.

"It was insane. I went in thinking it was gonna be the usual. No natural lighting, no furniture, and one of those heaters that sounds like the Bombing of Dresden," Novak recalled, still visibly shaken. "But then...I saw them..."

Novak, who pays $2,700 a month for a 100-square-foot apartment on the Lower East Side, was stunned by the sheer audacity of the booths, which boasted colorful decorations, fun themes, and even hardwood floors.

“These kids don’t understand how good they have it. Some of these booths have stairs. Stairs! The last time I lived in an apartment with stairs was when that couple from Williamsburg went upstate and left their door unlocked. They left their son there, but turns out we were on the same dosage for Adderall. I miss that guy. He was the best roommate I ever had."

When questioned by reporters on whether anything from the booths reminded him of New York, John had this to say:

“When I was standing in line inside one of the booths, I really felt at home. The wall of plastered college kids in front of me reminded me of my roommates: Mark, Jim, Motif, Felipe, Kurt, Vin'nyla, a stray dog, Eric Adams, and that prostitute who keeps stealing my stuff... Oh wait, that's Eric, too.”

Sources confirm that Novak was spotted attempting to negotiate a year-long lease for the SDC Booth with freshman Jeremy Chen, a Business Administration student. When asked to comment, Chen remarked, "He was begging me to rent the place to him... it was kind of sad. He had a pain in his eyes that I had never seen before. It made me realize something. When I grow up, I want to be a landlord."

Novak was last seen attempting to fit his couch in Undergraduate Senate's "Lynchian" themed doghouse.

B	I	N	G	O
Crash a UHaul	Park in the CFA parking lot	Offend an alumni	Confuse a Pitt student	Go on vacation instead
Fall off the ferris wheel	Invite your visiting parents to a rager	Send incriminating photo to parents	Violate OSHA	Sleep
Report a friend to CMU PD	Steal a buggy, get chased by CMU PD	FREE: Do homework	Win something illegitimately	Get a dorm noise complaint
Wake up in a random basement	Single-handedly demolish Donner	Misuse a scissor lift	Go backstage somewhere illicitly	Go sledding
Destroy grass in a fit of rage	Obtain permanent trauma	Throw up on a friend	Discover the limits of caffeine	Get banned from a frat

This issue of readme is brought to you by:

Editors: Eshaan Joshi, Tali Kirschenbaum, G. Ichthyomorphosis, Daniel Yin
Problem Solvers: Kevin Keane, HJ Willia

Journalists: "Save-a-tree" Bhat, "Tyan Rosh", Mihir Deshpande, Jimothy Yachtsson, Isabelle Florence, Gilgamesh Ichthyomorphosis, Robin Notin, Kanya Dogan, Jimothy Yachtsson, Alex Werth, Bridget McMahon, Johnny Truant, Benner Rogers, Samson Rozansky, Benjamin Moore

Cover Artist: Maere Lynn, Vinny Radford

Artists: Benner Rogers, Rhodes N. Spectre, Gilgamesh Ichthyomorphosis, Alex Werth, Vinny Radford, Bianca T.

Tech Team: Wade Cheng, Danya Kogan, G. Ichthyomorphosis, "Tyan Rosh"
As always, see you next time! And have an amazing Carnival.