Fear and Loathing in Stack'd Underground

Baili Jiang
Acquiring formaldehyde in suspicious quantities

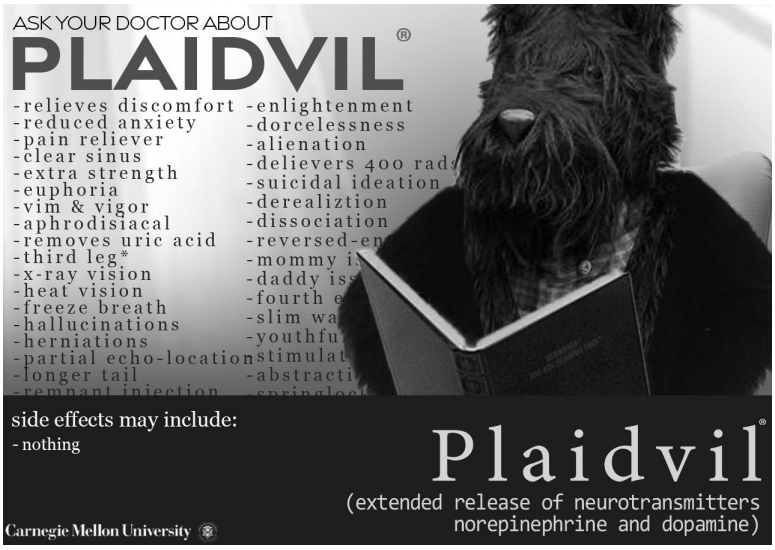

Stack'd Underground is, on most nights, a thriving center of off-duty student activity. Many regular joes are here to grab a quick bite or chat with their classmates. But for enterprising CMU students like me and you, this is also the perfect opportunity to make a quick dime without even breaking a sweat.

You'll want to find a seat early on in the night, off to one of the dimly-lit sides. Find one that puts the entire room in easy view. It's not a bad idea to get a small meal and pass the time a bit—you know, deflect some suspicion. Very important: Do not get a burger! Opt instead for a pre-packaged salad, no dressing, no iceberg lettuce. You'll see why soon enough.

Once the place begins to fill up with students, it's time to scope out your prospects. Your prime suspects will be alone, standing out against all the groups of friends. It's more than likely that they'll come in straight from Hunt and order a classic Stack'd burger in the hopes of eating away their depression. Their cloud of stress and despair makes them reckless and distracted—in other words, an easy target.

As they start to eat their meal, take close watch. At first, they'll consume the burger at a ravenous pace, but they will soon slow down until each swallow looks like a struggle. As they near the final bite, their face will turn green and their eyes hazy. They'll struggle towards the bathroom—and here's your chance! As the toilets are going through the trenches, calmly slide out of your seat, and walk over to their former seat. Take their backpack (but leave the fries, you're not a monster), and leave.

If you're lucky, you'll score a laptop and a few other pieces of tech to sell on Facebook Marketplace or CMUsed. Bonus points if you sell it right back to them. A single night's labor can easily turn several hundred dollars profit this way. In fact, without this life hack, I probably wouldn't have been able to pay my tuition all these years. So don't cramp my style—if you need some cash too, I hear that Yella's and Wild Blue have had many a similar story.

In response to overpopulation, student begins buying classrooms

Bertie Wooster
War, war, what isn't it good for?

Many college students are worried about how to invest their money and save up for their lives ahead. However, few are trying strategies as innovative as investing in CMU classroom space. This innovative idea was first thought up by Tepper student D. R. Hortonne, who expressed an interest in securing their financial future.

"The economy is rough right now, and I'm not exactly interested in working in fast food, y'know?" said Hortonne in a recent interview. "I thought I should find a smart way to build some equity, you know? I noticed that classrooms at CMU were in high demand, and I thought, woah, jackpot!"

Hortonne began looking into purchasing classrooms in August. They noticed that there was very little competition, as people were used to exchanging classrooms for free. "Apparently there's this thing called the University Registrar? I don't really care. Old, outdated systems are mere distractions from true entrepreneurship. I've already begun staking my claim on classrooms with signs and changing the locks."

Hortonne believes that demand for classrooms will continue to grow with CMU's undergraduate enrollment. Being a rapidly expanding university, the administration struggles to build new learning spaces at an adequate rate. "By getting the classrooms for free—or nearly free—right now, I'll be able to sell them later at a sizable profit margin."

Professors at the Tepper School of Business commend Hortonne's initiative, and have even more suggestions for the student. "They should consider renting out the classrooms they buy, and hiking the rent once residents are already settled," said Professor Lennar, an expert in real estate. "This brilliant student is already on his way to heading a lucrative private equity firm and securing his wealth for life." Horton happens to be the child of hedge fund billionaires.

CRYPTID CORNER

PRESENTED BY:
ISABELLE FLORENCE

SQUONK

Bummed out by my cryptid research turning up a hoax, I returned home with my head hung low. You know what's fucked up? I was half-looking forward to getting seduced by a sea cow. I'm not into cows in that way, but there's something nice about feeling wanted, even if it that wanting was based in a desire to wipe out all life on land. I remembered all the relationships I've fallen out of to pursue my work. I decided to take a walk in Frick Park to clear my mind. I feel very confident that I am not into cows in that way.

Regardless, I was walking through the woods and came across a small puddle, which was odd since we hadn't had rain in a while. I looked around for a source, but only found another puddle, and another, and another. Faster and faster, I followed the moistened path until I was face to face with a massive wrinkled pig, exactly what I had hoped for. Not that I am into pigs either, I feel like that might need clarification.

It was the lonesome Squonk, a beast that spends its time wandering the forests of Pennsylvania, crying over its own appearance, then looking in the puddles of tears, seeing its own reflection, and crying some more. I get it.

I sat down and rested my back on the Squonk's ballsack-adjacent skin. I felt a little better. The squonk used its signature ability of instantly turning into a puddle. I fell backwards into the puddle. I felt a little worse.

Student Tells All: Internship at Anduril

Active Sex-Haver Extraordinaire

AB is bringing back its premier event: Sex Week! Originally hosted jointly by the Women's Center and AB Special Events, AB has since divorced the Women's Center and is now uniting with the esteemed Kenneth C. Griffin School of Computer Science. In the spirit of this sacred union, AB will be hosting a daily 7:00 P.M. event in McConomy Auditorium (except for Tuesday's special event) celebrating God's favorite pastime.

Monday: Live Sex Demonstration
Kicking things off with a bang, AB will be hosting an in-person demonstration on how to have sex. At CMU, we understand many of you may have never heard of sex. AB will be sure to go over the whole process, with special attention to awkward propositions and telling anyone you can that you are, in fact, no longer a virgin. Bring your friends, enemies, and everyone in between to witness a life-changing experience, raw and unfiltered. (Note: event duration is dependent on Jack's stamina. Lock in, Jack.)

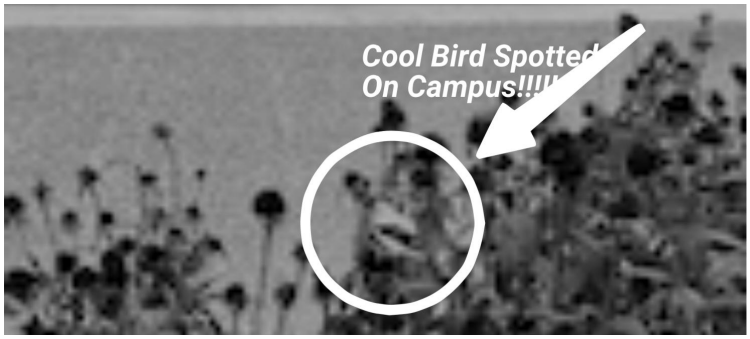

Tuesday: Build Your Own Sex-Bot, powered by Roboclub
In this special event, join Roboclub in the UC Basement and work with Roboclub tools and mentors to build your very own personal sex doll! Beginner's kits provided; all experience levels welcome. Choose your favorite customizations from prebuilt modules, like circumsized or light-medium bush. Bring a list of your craziest kinks, wishes, and desires, and Roboclub will help make your dreams a reality! (Note: If you represent a company interested in partnering professionally with Roboclub, for sex projects or otherwise, contact them via officers@roboclub.org)

Wednesday: Sex-Engine Optimization, with OnlyFans
Struggling to land a summer internship? Looking to build your own business? OnlyFans media designers and insider consultants will be detailing all the best tips and tricks to boost your OF SEO. If you have never heard of any of those letters, don't worry! Our sexperts will teach you not only what the act of intercourse is, but how to turn any object into something sexy! Time will be available after the presentation for light networking; prepare your resumes and lingerie.

Thursday: Speed-Fucking
Want to actually meet hot singles in your area? Come to the sex week speed-fucking event, and we will have you making love to a total stranger in no time! Our expert matchmakers will rapidly assign you to the person in the room you coincidentally find least attractive, and watch as you nerds awkwardly fumble around with each other's genitals. We will provide complimentary sex-coaches-in-training, as a voice of support and to overpraise your educational journey - after all, experiential learning is very important! If you prefer not to be coached during the act itself, we will do our best to take your preferences into account.

Friday: Abortion Options on SHIP, presented by Planned Parenthood
After your nonstop fucking fun week, join Planned Parenthood and learn what options you have in the extremely unlikely scenario that you need an abortion! They will review the options and costs for getting an abortion, from pills to coathangers. If you are a frequent sex-haver, you may even be interested in Planned Parenthood's subscription service, which provides unlimited abortions a month for one low fee!

Best Courses to Use As Foreplay

Down and Out

Picture this: you go to the bar on a Friday night, and all the girls there are having a great time. They're laughing, dancing, maybe even falling in love. Disgusting. There's nothing worse than watching two people hit it off at the bar. Luckily for humanity, I've dedicated my life to preventing this tragedy. I believe every woman deserves to go home alone and furious. But I can't do it alone! Here are four lines you can use to stun and disarm women at your establishment of choice.

"Hey girl, you look like you cry on your birthday." For this line to be effective, the girl you're wooing needs to have a certain melancholia to her demeanor. Is she wearing a cardigan at the bar, shivering even in the hot throng of bodies? Is she staring into her bruised-purple reflection in a glass of room-temperature house-red? Did she mention being an English major? If so, you should go ahead with this line. Stunned, she'll look around the room and realize she's already in a memory. Then she'll begin to weep. Now's your chance to reach into her tote bag and steal her digital camera full of photos that capture the transience of joy. Youth, friendship, and good parties are temporary. The money you make from pawning off a stolen camera is also temporary. Now you're crying too. What good is a putdown line if you don't get dragged down with it?

"I'm betrothed to another woman. Her dowry is much greater." This one is great to use if you've already captured her interest. Now, you don't actually need to have a betrothed for this line to work—it's all about the bluff. If you introduce competition, you'll have a stronger hand in dowry negotiations with the girl you actually want. Plus, women love a man who knows his worth in farm animals. The cold season is coming, and unless you want to die of rickets, you're going to need milkable cattle and stores of canned produce. If you really want to score some good crops, make sure to go for a woman on the cusp of being an old maid. Any girl who's legally drinking should do.

"If I buy you a drink, can I play on your phone?" It's hard to find a line more effective than this. Most people who buy drinks for girls never get anything out of it, but you will. You'll get five glorious minutes of Toca Boca Hair Salon. You'll get to touch the fabulous ass of the Temple Run guy as he sprints away from the grave he's robbing. You'll get to go back for round 2 in Geometry Dash because you fucked up the secret route. Never underestimate the power of a quid pro quo. (Note: if she doesn't have Goat Simulator with all the goats unlocked, feel free to dump her drink and leave her with the bill. She doesn't deserve your charity.) Remember, a woman may break your heart, but, with your innate masculine talent, a high score is forever. "Say goodbye to Muffins before I put the needle in." Is there a better putdown than this?

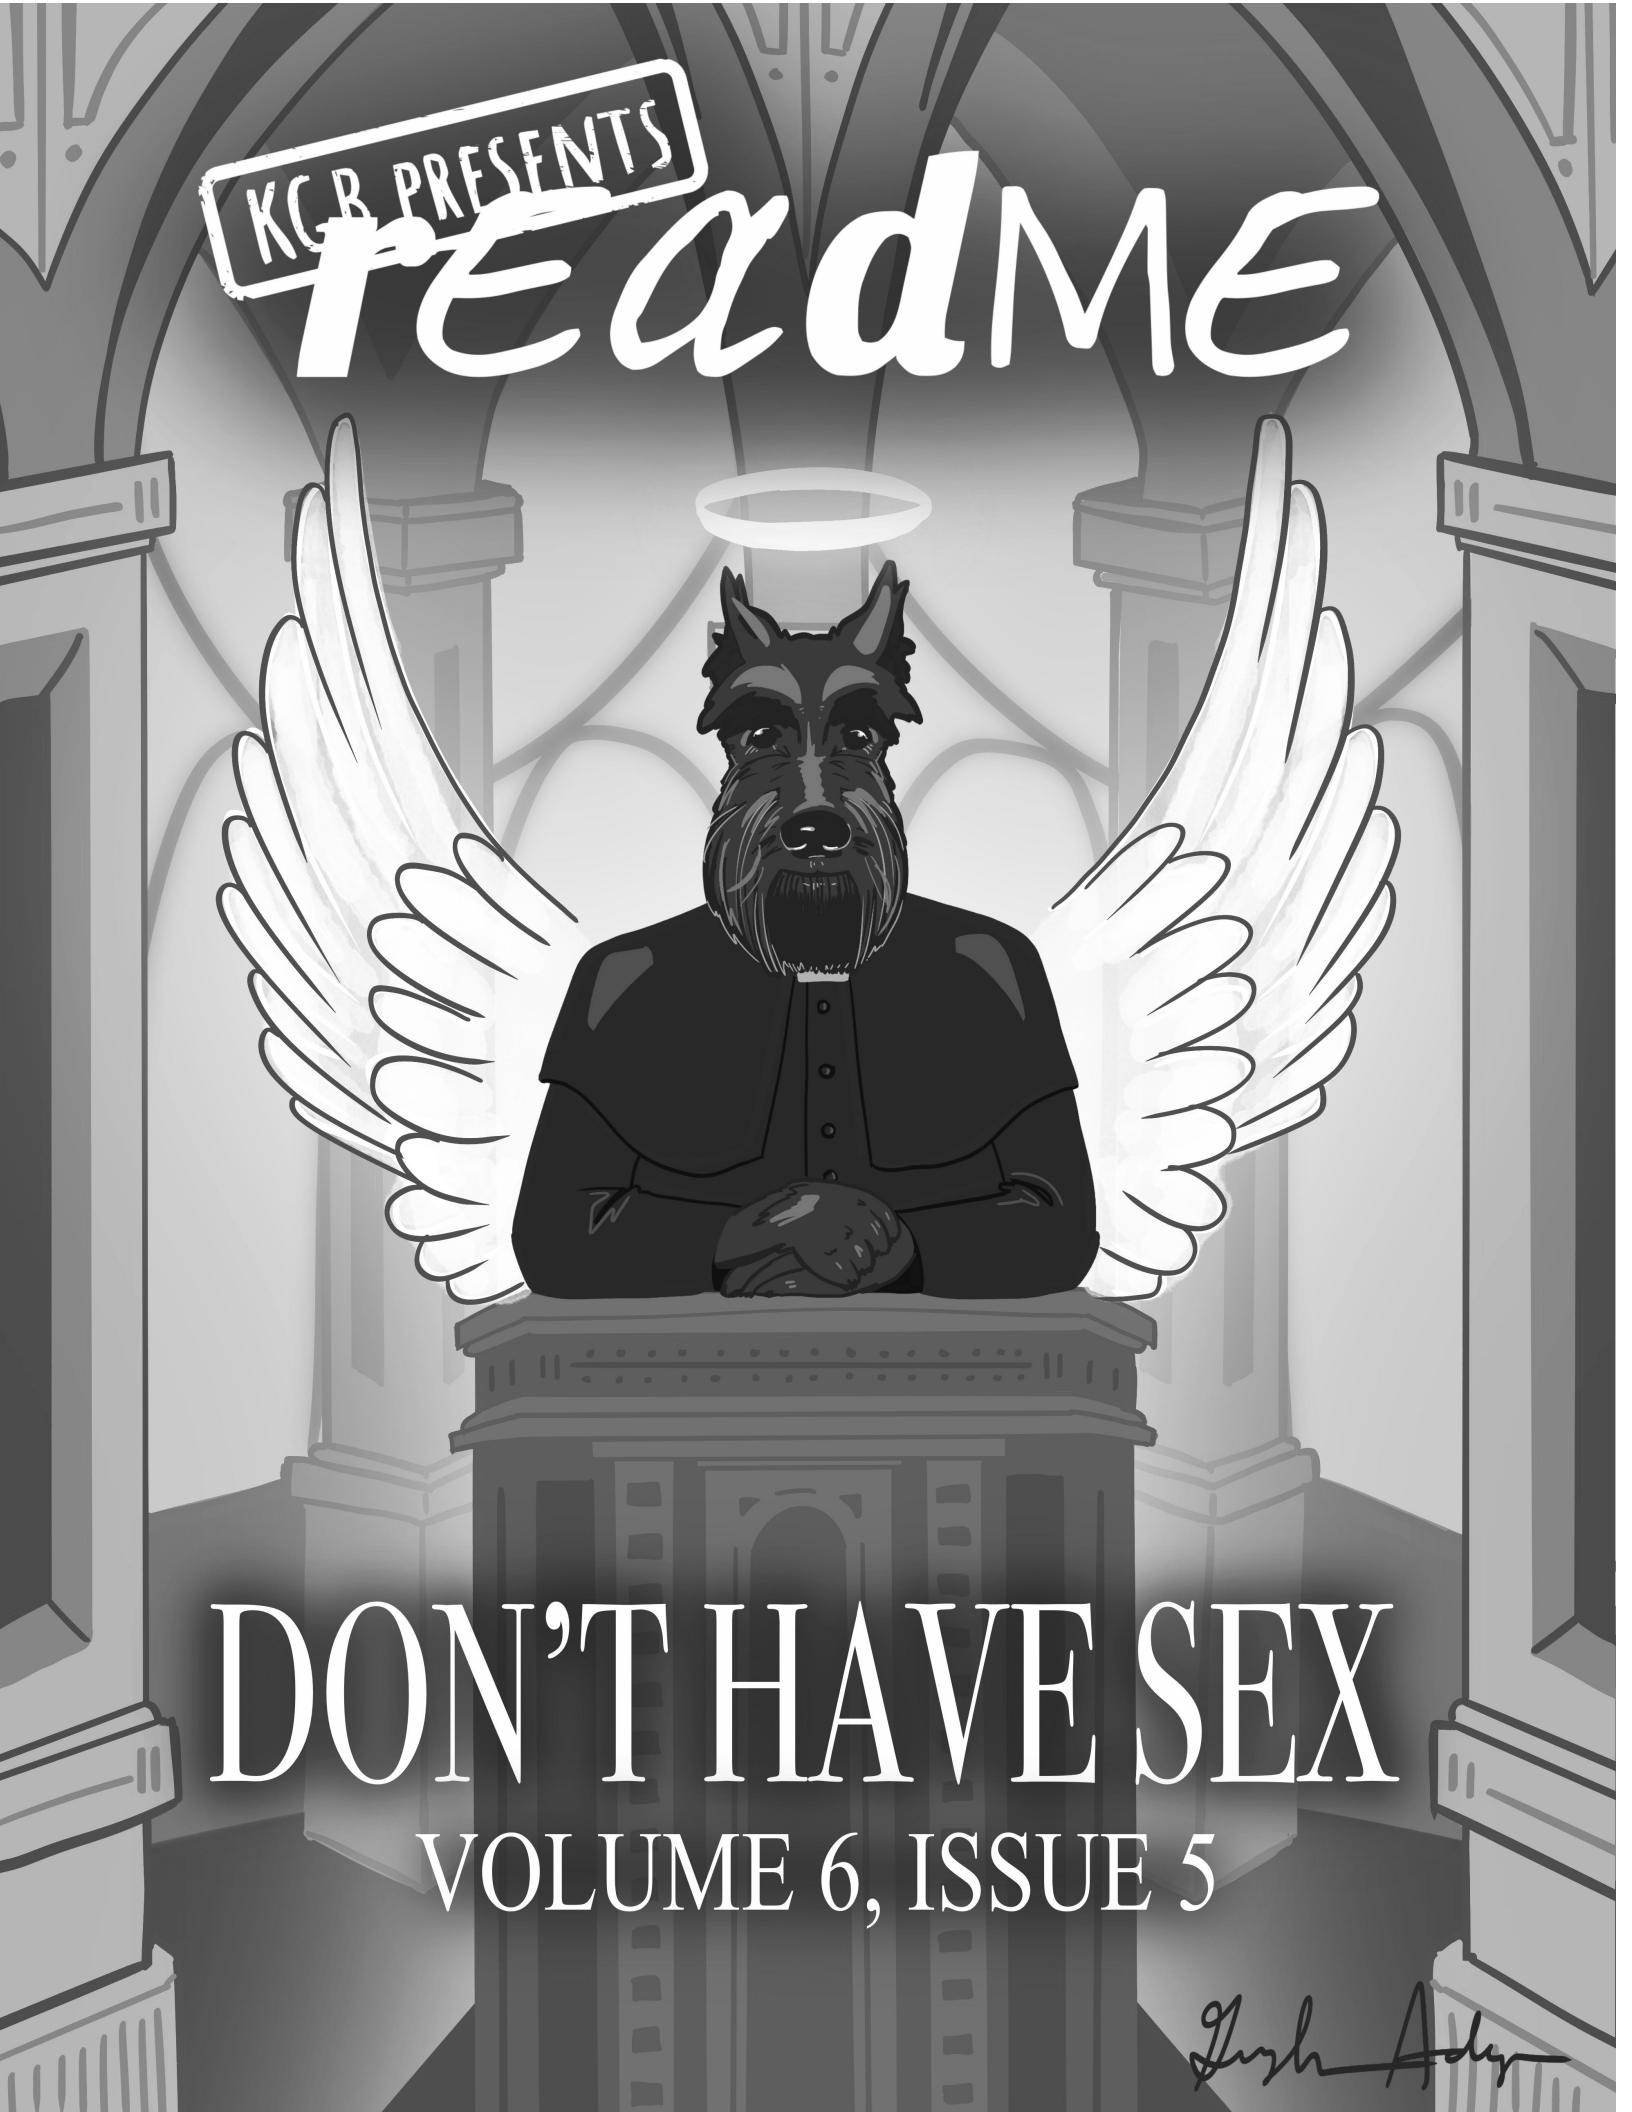

The next time you're out on a Friday night and you want to absolutely ruin someone's time, make sure to read directly from this list. But only the parts in quotation marks! Otherwise she might laugh at you, and then call the bartender over so he can laugh at you, and then the two of them might bond over how foolish you are. Before you know it, they're exchanging numbers, pouring Sprite on your head, and heading back to her place hand-in-hand. All of this is the exact opposite of your goal. Remember, love is everywhere, ready to pounce at the slightest mistake. Be careful out there, and happy hunting!
